

President of AFES member countries support Thailand to host the 15th Congress of the ASEAN Federation of Endocrine Societies – AFES2009

It is only 5 months counting down to the international medical event of the 15th Congress of the ASEAN Federation of Endocrine Societies (AFES2009). On 20 June 2009 Associate Professor Ampha Suthijumroon welcomed the President of AFES member countries joining an official meeting to update the congress preparation as well as to ask for support from the member countries. The President of AFES member countries agreed to support this great event, although some of them are concerned about the political issue or even the swine flu situation in Asian countries.

By the end of the explicit discussion, they showed their strong supports to the congress because of the innovative and substantive scientific program by promoting the congress through their colleagues and pharmaceutical companies in their countries. Their expertise and experiences were very helpful to the organizing committee, that could energize the committee to make the congress becoming the most successful and outstanding medical meeting with 1,500 expected delegates.

Last but not least, Thailand offers the great services and hospitality of modern facilities and attractive natural resources, and most distinctive Thai culture.
